

Laura Lienhard Textile

Humble cotton-tape yarn has grown into Shoelace Leno. The Vermont-based company specializes in natural fibers, fashioned through a process from 80 percent cotton and 20 percent wool. They come in earthy tones of white, bark, and stone. 47 Maple Street, Suite 104, Burlington, VT 05401; 802-660-8528; lauralienhard.com. circle 538

P. Kaufman

Carapace, Spiro, and Lava are three new eco-friendly amigos for the hospitality market. Carapace features large-scale, well-defined geometric scales, and Spiro recalls happy hours spent with Spirograph. All three fabrics are recycled polyester made from postconsumer and postindustrial waste, measure 54 inches wide, and can withstand 30,000 double rubs. 3 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10016; 212-292-2385. circle 538

Chella Textiles

Travel to the sunny Italian Riviera with Pallazio Stripe. Thanks to its solution-dyed acrylic, this 54-inch-wide fabric will pop for many summers to come. In Winter Wheat, it is also available in Bullion, Chaparral, Hollyberry, sand dune, sunrise, and White Sage and tests to 12,000 double rubs. 32 Anacapa Street, Santa Barbara, CA 93101; 805-560-8400; chellatextiles.com. circle 539

Hinson & Company

Users will be trumpeting Texture Suit for its look of elephant hide, with a soft, subtly textured weave. Made of a nylon-polyester blend, elephant hide can take 500,000 double rubs, a testament, easily thanks to its nano finish. Available in tan, russet, pecan, and 14 other colors. 100 Avenue, Long Island City, NY 11101; 718-778-7777. circle 540

Anichini

Who says the age of royalty is past? Not Anichini. Tell Charlemagne, a regal, romantic pattern of roses, and pomegranates woven into a fabric of viscose, wool, acrylic, and cotton. This old-world castles and chilly winter nights wide fabric is perfect for coverlets, duvet covers, and table dressings. P.O. Box 67, Turin, Italy 10121; 800-553-5309; anichini.com. circle 541
